Additionally, Amber gave an update on the Thrive pilot program. Thrive currently has one individual that is fully enrolled in the pilot project and two more coming in. Thrive Program Supervisor, Melissa Bishop, also stated it has a slow progression, simply due to clients having to get through the curriculum, before they shift over to the behavioral health components. She also mentioned that clients are attracted to it when informed about it, so they think that is a positive sign.

Kimberly Talbot mentioned that contradictory language on the 52-week intervention requirement is being challenged. A new Bannock County domestic violence court judge will be issuing an opinion which is expected to be released May 19, 2026.

Meeting adjourned at 11:39 a.m. MDT
